Hi Emili

Could we add this to the HMAS committee to seek clarification from members as to the application of weddings in and around the Site and whether the committee would like to seek the council approval to update the conservation frameworks bounds?

Hi Joanne, Joanne and Dave,

We also received an email response from a Cruise Ship passenger based in QLD:

My response is saved in TRIM:

http://laudine/hprmwebclientclassic/download?uri=892811&t=record&lang=In_english&mbd=false

I have had no contact from Trevor myself so will leave this with Joanne Brown to respond.

I have spoken to Dave and suggested that he might want to raise this with the Sydney Committee. Dave – is it worth the Committee updating the map with the red and blue line or updating the Conservation Framework to explicitly say no weddings if that is what they want?

The following form was filled out on the City of Greater Geraldton website.

Details of Feedback or Request Saturday 13th June I toured Geraldton from the Dawn Princess. After visiting the museum (excellent) I went to the HMAS sydney memorial. Here I was disappointed and somewhat disgusted that the site was being used as a venue for a wedding. Music was playing and I saw the bride posing for photographs and later the bride and her father hiding behind the wall of remembrance prior to their appearance at the event. I spoke to one of the people giving information about the site and he too was worried since the wedding party had said that they had council permission.

this site, is surely, one of the most important and sacred sites in the whole of australia and to allow it to be used for such frivolous an affair demeans the lives of all those lost on that fateful day. How any council could consider this a suitable use of sacred space, I shudder to think.

I made my feelings known to the local Tourist Office who gave me this link and I feel inclined to copy this letter to the local newspaper.

Hi Jo

Below is an email from Trevor Ralph, President Tour Guides Ass regarding the wedding that was taking place at the HMAS Sydney II Memorial at the same time as Cruise Passengers were having tours.

With regards to the cruise ship dates - these are out more than 2 years in advance, so it isn't like it was sprung upon the City.

I agree with the Guides from the Memorial - this shouldn't be a place for weddings.

Hi Jo,

Saturday was a huge day at the HMAS Sydney Memorial for the tour Guides with many hundreds of people visiting from the cruise ship in port, and many travelers also visiting our car park was also full.

To our Dismay around 1pm people started to arrive to set up for a wedding ,these people said they had permission from the City to use the Memorial for their wedding . They took over the car park , especially the area we have set aside to gather groups for tours of the site . We have witches hats set out to keep cars out of the muster area, this is obviously a health and safety issue, and cannot be compromised .

When the guests for the wedding arrived they told us that they had reserved parking and the witches hats had been placed there by the city for them, they were adamant on this issue .

For the guides to operate successfully we trust this will Never happen again,not only for us but also for the bridal party .

G'day Hugh,

Thank you for your message.

Yes, I was in receipt of the National Trust (WA) Interpretation Strategy and the two recommendations you have shown. I have no executive role in any of these matters, only advisory which I am happy to continue in.

As I understand the situation, the Trust's recommendations are a matter for the CI authorities to implement so I am not clear as to what your official role is in the process. Nevertheless, I make the following comments:

1. I expect that the Gull Marker is a project that will need to be initiated by the Shire of Christmas Is. The design looked at by the Trust is a design by SmithSculptors and therefore its property.

2. The website that you show below is not the appropriate site for the information about the Unknown Serviceman as it is the private site of SmithSculptors, the designers and builders of the Memorial at Geraldton intended to provide information about the Memorial, how it started, who designed and built it and it's symbolism. I expect that the matter will have to be taken up by the Shire of CI with the City of Greater Geraldton (CGG) to include appropriate information in its own website, that of its Visitor Centre and of the HMAS Sydney Memorial. Similarly, any additional information at the memorial itself will need to be taken up with CGG which would ultimately involve SmithSculptors. To this purpose, I have Cc'd the Mayor of the CCG.

I am happy to provide guidance about appropriate content regarding information about the Unknown Serviceman, noting that it continues to be a matter of great sensitivity to the relatives of those killed in HMAS Sydney.

Kind regards

Bob

Subject: Unknown Sailor - National Trust recommendations

Dear Bob,

Since our meeting at the Perth office of the National Trust (WA) in April last year, the Trust has released the report on its Interpretation Strategy for Christmas Island in November. Page 45 of the report states that, "The removal of the 'Unknown Serviceman' purportedly from the HMAS Sydney from Christmas Island and the process of his reinterment has not been properly told at the memorial in Geraldton or on Island". [see attachment]

Accordingly, the Trust has made the following two recommendations,

- Emplacement of a single Gull Marker on Christmas Island which reflects the 'Dome of Souls' memorial to HMAS Sydney in Geraldton.
- Include information about the Unknown Serviceman and the connection to Christmas Island on the memorial website, www.hmasydney Memorial Geraldton.com.au, with consideration to on-site interpretation in Geraldton.

Do you agree with these proposals, and could you please advise if there is a plan and timeline for implementing changes to the memorial website and other on-site interpretation in Geraldton?

Kind Regards,

Hugh

Subject: RE: Unknown Sailor - Public Display of Artefacts

Good morning all,

I agree that the Unknown Serviceman and the related Christmas Island story should be told in a way that acknowledges this important part of history.

I'm sure that most on this address list know that my position on the body itself is quite clear – that it stays where it is, in the War Cemetery at Geraldton. It is not a matter for Christmas Is authorities to lobby on nor for bureaucrats Navy or the Office of War Graves to decide. It is a matter in which priority should be given to the wishes and feelings of the close relatives and descendants of all of those killed in HMAS Sydney, whom this man represents. Since finding the wreck of both Sydney and Kormoran in 2008 I have been in contact with some 1800 relatives at first and remain in frequent contact now with some 300 family groups. I have been to every Commemorative Service at Geraldton each November and met very many of those widows, sons, daughters, brothers, sisters at al. Moreover, since the notion that the body should be returned to CI was first raised I have canvassed the views of those family groups and almost to a person, they were shocked and distressed that any such action could ever be considered. They all believe that he belongs where he now lies. Any attempt to 'obtain' the body will fail on those grounds alone.

I suggest that now is the time to drop any intent to continue lobbying for the body to be re-exhumed and concentrate on more appropriate means of including CI's part into the wider Sydney story. I am very happy to assist with finding those means.

Kind regards

Bob

Dear Greg,

Christmas Island Shire President Gordon Thompson confirmed to me a few weeks ago that re-interment of the Unknown Sailor is still something Councillors feel strongly about, but I think we can be open to alternative ways of resolving the issue.

In particular, Commonwealth Government assistance to provide a public display of artefacts connected to the story would go a long way to assuaging our concerns. These could be included in the Tai Jin House heritage display at Christmas Island and at the Geraldton Museum.

Could you please let me know if you support this approach, and would be willing to provide advice and assistance to allow this to happen?

Please call me on 0409 991 952 to discuss.
