DESCRIPTION

Walls:	Weatherboard	Roof:	Corrugated Iron
Condition:	Good	Integrity:
Original fabric:
Modifications:

This timber framed weatherboard clad house has a gable corrugated iron roof with central brick chimney over the main part of the house and a hipped corrugated iron roof over the front room which extends east of the house. There is an enclosed verandah on the north side and part of the east side at the entrance to the house. The back (west) wall has been enclosed with asbestos. Windows were originally timber framed. There is evidence of some of the windows being replaced with different sized aluminium framed windows.

HISTORY

Construction Date:	unknown	Source:	Stan Gratte
Architect:	Not available
Builder:	Not available

In the late 1890s with the completion of the Geraldton to Mullewa Railway line this place became known as Mullewa Junction. Land was set aside for a townsite in 1900, and three years later was gazetted as Mullewa Junction. In 1905 the town was renamed Crowther, only to have the name changed again in 1906 to Narngulu. It is possible this house was built to house a Narngulu railway worker.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

93 Carr Street has significance as evidence of later settlement patterns of the Greenough district through the introduction of railways, in particular, the Geraldton-Mullewa line and the increasing importance of Narngulu as a railway settlement. The place is also one of only a few original weatherboard houses in the Shire.
