Located on the eastern side of the railway and immediately fronting Railway Parade, all that remains of the original Tardun Store is what was the northern section of the building. This remnant timber framed building is clad with corrugated iron sheeting to the side walls while the frontage features a combination of shadow line sheeting and concrete bricks to window sill height. A shallow pitched awning provides some protection to the building's front elevation.

Following the opening of the Wongan Hills railway to Mullewa in March 1915, the Tardun district developed rapidly. Much of the surrounding land was settled and a hall was constructed for the local community. The original store at Tardun is believed to have been opened in the 1920s. Since 2000 the building has rapidly deteriorated and the southern section collapsed and was removed.
